

I decided to add two panels to the end of the story. My first panel has to do with what she said at the end. Marji said "Freedom had a price." In the panel I drew she is sitting on the plane by herself and she is just questioning herself and if the price she's paying is actually worth freedom. Then my next panel is a couple months or so after she has been in France and she has freedom, but she is thinking about her parents and how much she misses them. Once again she is questioning herself if the price is worth the freedom. Also I tried to show freedom by her not wearing a veil and being able to walk down the road without officers questioning her.